The New Zealand Institute of Architects announced its 2003 Supreme and New Zealand Awards at a Gala Dinner in Auckland, held in conjunction with the bi-annual NZIA Conference. Attended by over 500 guests, these are the most significant professional recognition that architects can receive in New Zealand.

Out of the NZIA-Resene New Zealand Award winners, three were announced as this year's NZIA-Resene Supreme Award winners.

Carrying with it inherent expectations that a stadium will entertain, Jade Stadium Christchurch impressed the jury with its external drama bounded by control and order. The true distinction is the theatre of circulation; the ramped approaches to the elevated colonnaded curving concourse, the diaphanous ramp and stair towers that display the fans in a public performance around the game of focus heightening the anticipation of the opposite amphitheatre, particularly when lit at night. Structure and occasion have been distilled within a tight budget.

Seamlessness in detail draws the eye to Northland House, a neo-modernist glass box book-ended by two apartments boasting dual benefits of occupancy and retreat. Referencing a modernist revival idiom favouring vertical over horizontal, walls over roof, planar structure over structural articulation and emphasising spatial continuity with the exterior, the home was a clear winner with the jury.

Saved from the brink of utilitarianism by the wit and inventiveness of the architects, Cumulus encompasses four levels of carparking and a further two of offices encased in a shell of a white veiled box rising in a dramatic range of spatial experiences above a subterranean realm of carparks. Unexpected and enigmatic, the architects have portrayed how imagination and supportive clients can produce a carpark/office complex that is not only cost-effective but also stimulating and beautiful.

The Gold Medal is bestowed by the NZIA for an outstanding contribution to the practice of architecture, demonstrated through the production of a consistently high-quality body of work over a period of time. The 2003 Gold Medal was bestowed on Peter Beaven. Though a self-proclaimed 'free spirit' from the start, he was very early influenced by the fine architecture of early Christchurch. With unusual confidence he embraced the construction traditions of the builder generation of his grandparents and set about making the kinds of places people might love. A well deserved award for an outstanding individual.
