

DESIGN IN COLOUR

A trio of whites makes for a deceptively simple yet sophisticated scheme.

The brief to architect Guy Tarrant for this new home in Point Chevalier, Tāmaki Makaurau, was to make a small but perfect house.

The result is delightful, and restful, painted in a trio of crisp, bright whites that complement oak cabinetry and pale brick walls. The chalky white of Resene Alabaster features on interior walls and exterior cladding, including the garage door, while Resene Half Alabaster appears on rafters over the outdoor terrace and on interior ceilings. Slender posts in the living area, meanwhile, are emphasised by Resene White Pointer – a stark off-white with a hint of black.
