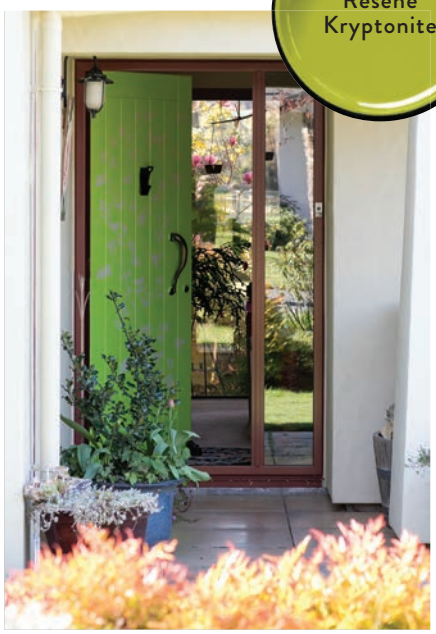
WINNER N° 3

MAKING an ENTRANCE

Yeti Grant's pretty front door, painted in Resene Kryptonite with flora and fauna motifs in Resene I Do, came about because she wanted to "brighten things up" after the loss of her husband of 46 years, Bruce. "I had already reupholstered my lounge furniture with a bright green fabric and also painted my dining table and chairs," she says. "I could say that colour saved my life." The third winner of our Making an Entrance competition painted the birds and cherry blossoms on her Taupō door herself using a silicon stencil to "tone down the green a bit". Never one to follow trends, Yeti says as well as bringing her joy, the colourful entranceway is a hit with others. "People who come to my front door always have a smile on their face which makes me happy."

Photographs Abby Dance



Resene
the paint the professionals use