AT EASE

- The enduring appeal of a neutral scheme has a lot to do with the flexibility it offers to evolve through the ages with simple updates of your furniture, homeware and art. Hushed, timeless tones create a lovely relaxed mood, and there's plenty of scope to add character.
- Visual and tactile texture appeals to multiple senses. Here, we painted the walls in Resene Eighth Stonewashed, then applied a topcoat of Resene Tablelands mixed with Resene Paint Effects Medium for a colourwashed look (the more Paint Effects Medium you add, the subtler the effect), using criss-cross brushstrokes to ensure an organic result.
- Tongue-and-groove panelling in a complementary neutral shade has a heritage sensibility that works a charm when teamed with quality homeware that's built to last. It also gets along well with structured contemporary furniture – opt for unfussy pieces with clean lines. ▷

SAGE ADVICE

- The monochrome schemes that have dominated interiors in recent years are shifting to include more natural colours, and green is being touted as the new grey. If you're on the hunt for a hue you can live with for years to come, greens that sway towards the sage part of the spectrum have real stickability. Think dusky, not pastel.
- Midtone hues like the Resene Thor used here pair beautifully with black, but for balance, we've used furniture and homeware in both lighter and darker shades than the wall. If your palette seems a bit too muted, shots of other earthy hues like ochre, rust and burnt umber will provide the tonal variation you need.
- When updating an existing scheme, let your furnishings guide your paint selection. Create a mood board featuring four or five colours; in time, you can add smaller décor items that fit with this overall look. ▷

MELLOW DRAMA

- Choosing deeper colours may seem like a bold move when you're thinking long-term, but embrace inky blues and you'll be rewarded for your confidence with a calm and cocooning bedroom that offers a real change of pace. A matte paint such as Resene SpaceCote Low Sheen provides a chic velvety finish that never goes out of style.
- Forget all notions of a dark space seeming gloomy. Atmospheric lighting from lamps and pendants with shades softens the impact by creating subtle shifts in colour.
- Play up the drama by painting your baseboards and any decorative wall moulding the same colour as your wall – when light hits the raised surfaces, the sculptural shadows created will add to the sophistication. We used half-round pine moulding for a simple look with a big impact. A boxy painted plinth provides another opportunity to add colour while maintaining a minimalist aesthetic. Ours doubles as a bedside table.
- Low-set furniture will make even more of a feature of your walls. Ensure the scene remains cosy and comfortable by including luxurious textured materials such as velvet, linen and wool. Accents in red hues with blue undertones create a striking combination.
