

Oxidised

FROM destruction comes this seasons latest looks. The colours of corrosion eat away at the competition and come out victorious in browns, greens, golds and blues. Earthy tones and metallic shines mix elements of new and old into an incredibly organic trend that grows faster than rust on the bottom of a car.

Clover Canyon delivers a dress that bursts with vibrant orange similar to that of Resene Flashback. The print is striking and bold, slightly painful to look at but incredibly interesting. With a balance of colour the dress isn't a neon sign, but enough to get noticed.

Calvin Klein goes for a darker tone in this deep rust coloured two-piece that is colour matched with Resene Legend. Like an urban warrior, this piece is a good mix of modern and tribal. And just like rust this warrior will eat through anything it gets its hands on.

Carven strike with a metallic orange skirt, like polished rust this skirt is similar to that of Resene Ayers Rock. Powerful and structured, if aluminium was orange, this is what it would be made of. The skirt has robotic elements and screams futuristic, it'll take a while for the rust to settle on this hardwearing cyborg armour.

Metallic and aged, this Christian Dior dress is sexy and sheer with a hint of serious. With a print like chain mail the dress looks as though the copper has aged and left a green stripe along the body similar to Resene Koru. A balance of strength and femininity, the dress leaves us with a feeling of Xena the Warrior Princess.

Alexander Wang presents a swamp colour with this deep dark green jumper matched by Resene Port Phillip. Simple and clean with an interesting texture, the jumper is cosy and has elements of punk in that it have a masculine shape and colour on a female model. Drop shoulders make for a relaxed fit done in a new and different way.

Chloe take a brighter approach with a limonite colour, similar to that of Resene Hive. Big and lush with a slightly faded colour, Chloe offers an incredibly comfortable coat that looks easy to wear and expensive to own.

And finally Belstaff show us the extent of corrosion in this leather biker jacket colour matched with Resene Irish Coffee. Weathered and worn, this jacket is a staple piece, timeless and always successful. No matter the damage you can always count on a functional leather jacket and this is no exception. ap
