The New Zealand Institute of Architects announced its 2001 National and Regional Awards at a Gala Dinner at Te Papa in May. These are the most significant professional recognition architects can receive in New Zealand.

The Institute's premier award, the Gold Medal, was presented to The Group, an Auckland group of architects who practised in the late 1940's and 1950's. Ted Nightingale, the original founder of Resene paints commissioned Bill Toomath from Group Architects to design his home during The Group's heyday. The design at the time was very unique - the floor was cast followed by the roof, then the walls were literally built between the two casts as the roof was raised to complete the shell.
